Prison authorities identified no less than 2000 inmates with more than one name. José Virgilio Sánchez Montoya called "Pechocho is one of them. He is sentenced to 500 years in prison, but the police just captured him this week in San Pedro Sula, while someone else with his name was sitting in the El Pozo prison.

Luis Chávez shares his artistic comment about this with us.

COPINH and MADJ invite to an information event about Berta's case today at 9am in Tegucigalpa.

Before yesterday's preliminary hearing, COPINH held a press conference outside the court building demanding more transparency by the Honduran state.

Two of the accused, Douglas Bustillo and Mariano Díaz, confess their participation and they await a abbreviated procedure. Sergio Rodríguez, meanwhile, claims that he is innocent. During the trial, the EU ambassador Ketil Karlsen as well as Spain's ambassador Miguel Albero Suarez were present.

The denouncement by the Liberal Party about the company Mapa Soluciones and its involvement in the General Elections caused a series of reactions. The National Anti-Corruption Council (CNA) reveals that they already were investigating the company and they will present their results to the MP shortly.

El Tiempo makes public some further information about the company. Apparently it was registered in September 2009 with only a 10'000 Lempiras capital basis.

Mapa Soluciones' director Faustino Reyes Rodríguez tries to defend his company and its work.

And the National Party tries to turn the tables by accusing the Liberal Party of having links to the company.

CESPAD urges swift reforms to forbid the use of public resources for campaigning.

PEN Honduras condemns the criminalization of three students Cesario Padilla, Sergio Ulloa and Moisés Cáceres. Cesario Padilla also works as a journalist and is on the board of directors at PEN Honduras.

UNAH's dean Julieta Castellanos now speaks of interference by the UN Human Rights Office because they dared to criticize the conviction of three students of usurpation for participating in a protest.

Some months back, UNAH authorities and student organizations came to an agreement which said that the latter can't be prosecuted solely for protesting. Now they claim that this agreement doesn't cover the three sentenced students, but student leader Fausto Cáliz denounces that the agreement has been dead for weeks, when student movements were forbidden to elect their leadership.

Yesterday's statement by the UN Human Rights Office in Honduras also mentions the agreement.

The Coalition against Impunity and the Articulation 611 think out loud about possible legal actions against the UNAH...

...and they request an investigation by Congress.

Human rights lawyer Joaquín A. Mejía Rivera lists four concerns for democracy resulting from the conviction of the three students.

Víctor Funes, a journalist at 45TV, was murdered yesterday when returning home in the morning.

Funes was also an aspiring candidate for Congress for the National Party. With the murder of Funes, 70 journalists have violently lost their lives in Honduras since 2003.

Just hours after his death, the police announced that they had captured his murderer.

According to Proceso Digital, he already confessed.

The Association of Students of Journalism denounces that two of their students may be expelled from UNAH for participating in peaceful protests.

UNAH; UN; Torture; (Re)Elections; US; Charter Cities; Journalists; APP; Electric Energy; PAC; and Inmates on the Move Again

Cynicism has taken hold again in Honduras. UNAH's dean Julieta Castellanos calls for a dialogue while state and her private security forces violently evict protesting students...

...and according to the students, she is the one giving the orders. Political science lecturer Divina Alvarenga denounces that Castellanos has handed over control to the armed forces and the police.

According to ConfidencialHN, five students were arrested during the violent eviction by the special forces command COBRAS.

Children visiting the dental center at UNAH were also affected by the gas bombs used by the state security forces.

Also in the north of Honduras, at the UNAH in the Sula Valley, police evicted protesting students arresting at least one.

Radio Progreso offers an overview of yesterday's repression.

CONADEH reacts to the repression by rejecting any form of violence and calling for an "open, inclusive and democratic" dialogue.

Various international human rights organization wrote an open letter demanding a stop to the criminalization of students.

ConexiHon investigated the surveillance of the student movement by ATIC and comes to the conclusion that it was illegal.

Six of the students who were arrested on Friday received alternative measures to imprisonment, i.e. they can await the next trial date on July 14 in freedom.

During the hearing, a mother denounced that the crisis at the UNAH has its origin in the behavior of its dean, Julieta Castellanos.

The student movement MEU demands her resignation.

MEU's president, Fausto Cálix, was stopped by police agents claiming they had an arrest warrant against him.

C-Libre requested an urgent meeting of the National Protection System (SNP) to discuss the conflict between UNAH and the students.

I believe it is now the third time that TSE magistrate David Matamoros promises that they will cancel the contract with Mapa Soluciones IF they come to the conclusion that the company doesn't fulfill all the requisites. The Association for a More Just Society (ASJ) asks the political party to find a solution to this problem.

PEN International launched an urgent action in favor of the three criminalized students, one of which (Cesario Alejandro Félix Padilla Figueroa) is a member of PEN Honduras.

UNAH students decided yesterday to continue with their protest against the reign of UNAH's dean Julieta Castellanos and the criminalization of their colleagues.

Castellanos continues to deny everything going so far as calling what is happening at the UNAH not a crisis but a conflict of a group of students.

The former Attorney General Edmundo Orellana Mercado views critically a possible participation of the European Union in the coming general elections.

As you may expect, yesterday's publication of the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse by Caritas on the Honduran elections has made quite a splash. The former TSE magistrate Enrique Ortez agrees with the points raised by Caritas and according to him, there is only one conclusion: Honduras needs a new electoral system.

Current TSE magistrate David Matamoros gives the Oppositional Alliance one week to decide how to split up the financial support every party running in the elections gets.

There are 123 million Lempiras to hand out to nine parties.

Matamoros also tries once more to defend the TSE's position regarding their contract with Mapa Soluciones and he makes clear that the electoral process won't be stopped.

Liberal presidential candidate Luis Zelaya disagrees with Matamoros' statements.

Meanwhile, the newly established and already disputed Clean Politics Unit met with a Dutch delegation.

Julieta Castellanos didn't attend a meeting by the National Council for the Protection of Human Rights Defenders, Journalists, Social Communicators and Judicial Operators. She was invited to give her declaration about UNAH's agreement with the students as well as about the situation with the private security company ESPA.

The lawyer Carlo Jiménez denounces that the MP on purpose didn't react to a petition by him in favor of the criminalized 20 students and the journalist Ronnie Huete whose audience takes place today.

UNAH's student took to the streets demanding a real dialogue and an end to the crisis at UNAH.

At the end of their protest, the students wanted to hand in a proposal to resolve the crisis but they weren't attended by UNAH authorities.

Roberto Briceño Jiménez sees this ongoing crisis as a battle between an exclusive neoconservative reform and an inclusive democratic one.

Both Proceso Digital and El Heraldito try to portray the students' protest as not representing UNAH students.

But according to the student movement MEU, only the Faculty of Law, which has historic ties with the National Party, didn't participate in the protests.

UNICEF rejects the proposal by the Inter-Institutional Commission of the Criminal Justice to increase the punishment against minors who commit a crime.

Belinda Portillo of the World Movement for Childhood criticizes the Honduran governments lack of support for children and denounces that the government rather hardens the criminal sentencing instead of investing in prevention and opportunities for Honduras' children.

A similar critique is voiced by Coiproducen's Wilmer Vásquez.

Luis Pedernera of the Children's Rights Committee laments that Honduras still pursues empirically discredited approaches such as wishing to lower the punishable age for children.

The MACCIH also adds its concerns to the debate, calling the application of penal law the "last resort".

Yesterday I was made aware that the UN Special Rapporteur for the Right to Education Koumbou Boly Barry was in Honduras this week. But there was almost no coverage about it except one article in which CONADEH claims that it has put an end to the conflict at the UNAH in 2016 with the joint agreement by the student movements and UNAH authorities, not mentioning that exactly at this moment this conflict has flamed up again. The UNAH authorities still continue to denigrate and criminalize the students. In a new press release they claim that hooded individuals enter the administrative building and caused damages - but no proof was provided.

They also accuse the students against all odds of denying a dialogue. The initial audience for the 20 students and one journalist was suspended yesterday and postponed to July 21.

UNAH authorities cut the financial support for one of the 20 criminalized student.

The General Coordinator of the Honduran government, Jorge Ramon Hernandez Alcerro, was given the opportunity by the Thomson Reuters Foundation to paint the JOH administration as eager to promote human rights. He even went so far as to claim that "With regards to indigenous land rights, the Hernandez administration has already made unprecedented actions to ensure many indigenous groups hold communal land titles in accordance to their own customs".

The newly created Clean Politics Unit announced that it singled out critical areas in Honduras where drug trafficking has financed political campaigns in the past. They intend to create centers there in which the public can denounce irregularities.

The EU will announce at the end of July if it will send an electoral observation mission to Honduras.

It is no surprise that the National Party would greet such a mission to have their elections legitimized.

The EU mission that is currently visiting Honduras stated that there is still enough time for electoral reforms.

UNAH; MACCIH; Organized Crime; (Re)Elections; Mining; IHSS; Penitentiary System; Homicide Rate; and a Cry from Hell's Prison

The crisis at UNAH arrived at a new tragic low. Roberto Gómez accompanied the criminalizing trial against his son and student Johan André Gómez on June 22 with a poster saying "I want my sons to have a good quality public education without repression and authoritarianism". The next morning at 5:30am he was murdered when leaving his house. This horrible event is seen by many as a sigh of intimidation against the student movement and all other human rights defenders. Libre congressman Rafael Alegría sees in his murder further proof of the existence of death squads in Honduras. The Alliance for Human Rights condemns the murder of the human rights defender Roberto Gómez. The student movement MEU repudiates the crime and demands a thorough investigation. A day before the murder, C-Libre has warned that UNAH's heat campaign endangers the life of the students... University student marched in honor of Roberto Gómez. And the reaction by UNAH's dean Julieta Castellanos: "It is normal that a relative of a student dies".

The UN Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights published its 24th comment on state obligations in the context of business activities. There are several interesting points regarding indigenous peoples, e.g. "[t]he obligation to respect economic, social and cultural rights is violated when States Parties prioritize the interests of business entities over Covenant rights without adequate justification, or when they pursue policies that negatively affect such rights. This may occur for instance when forced evictions are ordered in the context of investment projects. Indigenous peoples' cultural values and rights associated with their ancestral lands are particularly at risk. States parties and businesses should respect the principle of free, prior and informed consent of indigenous peoples in relation to all matters that could affect their rights, including their lands, territories and resources which they have traditionally owned, occupied or otherwise used or acquired."

The former UNAH dean and human rights defender Juan Almeyda Bonilla calls out to the Honduran intellectuals to stand by the struggle of the university students.

A group of students announced yesterday to start a hunger strike. They intend to continue it until the resignation of Julieta Castellanos.

They further denounce that a private security guard cut the tire of one student's car, an act they grabbed on video.

In a press conference, the Human Rights Alliance declared the repression against the students a national shame. They also emphasized their solidarity not only with the protesting students, but with the organizations helping them, such as national human rights organizations and the UN Human Rights Office in Honduras.

During the press conference, ConfidencialHN spoke with Manuel González Cerén, who had his financial support cut for being part of the protests.

The Coalition against Impunity emitted a press release denouncing the ongoing repression and criminalization of the student movement as well as the murder last Friday of Roberto Gómez, a father in solidarity with his sons protest.

The faculty of law offered in a press release to help mediate between the students and the UNAH authorities.

The latter, meanwhile, announced a suspension of all academic and administrative activities for today in response to the announced protests by the students which coincides with the 8th anniversary of the coup d'état.

Honduras is remembering the coup d'état from eight years ago. El Pulso dedicates one article to the assassination of the 19 year-old Isis Obed Murillo Mencías

El Pulso also reminds us about the less well-known murder of Pedro Magdiel.

In an interview with Berta Oliva, COFADEH's coordinator, El Pulso offers an analysis of the coup and its still lasting consequences.

The opposition commemorated the anniversary with a protest march.

Pasos de Animal Grande reports on the start of the hunger strike by UNAH students.

Defensores en Línea offers a good overview of the third week of the newest wave of student protests.

The march by the students was postponed to today. They also denounced harassment against the students conducting a hunger strike.

The student movement MEU called for a solidarity protest with the students in hunger strike.
