Javier Suazo makes an interesting analytical link between the economic adjustment programs by the IMF and drug trafficking.

Another analysis, this time on the armed forces nexus of drug trafficking, comes from Joaquín A. Mejía Rivera.

One tool to combat organized crime in Honduras is the Efficient Collaboration Bill, which was recently presented by MACCIH. El Puslo lists some of the requirements that are needed for the law to work. MACCIH and the MP announced that a team with members from both institutions will investigate Honduran politicians singled out by the testimonies arrested drug traffickers in the US.

In the same press conference, MACCIH also denounced that there is growing pressure from some political sectors to kick them out of the country.

<http://elpulso.hn/declaratoria-oficial-de-las-internas-2017/>

El Pulso has some more details on the dispute between the TSE and PAC. The TSE wants PAC to hold its internal elections on May 21. But PAC will open the ballots this morning at 7am and hold the electoral process today.

One problem with the date set by the TSE is that it will give the political opposition just four days to decide on a political alliance or even less. By May 25, all alliances must be officially listed. If the TSE were to take just three days to officially announce the results of the primary election by PAC in May, this would give the political opposition only two days...

It wasn't a surprise, when the initial audience was canceled in the case against some of the accused of being involved in the assassination of Berta. The MP failed to share information with the legal representatives of Berta's family. A new date for the audience was set for the coming month. In a press release, COPINH denounces the lack of will by the Honduran government to bring justice to the case of Berta.

COPINH got support by the UN Special Rapporteur on Indigenous People who currently is in Honduras (see articles below).

Further support came from the EU ambassador Ketil Karlsen who was present during the (short) audience.

Radio HRN campaigns against the decriminalization of abortion. They claim that 3350 women lose their lives in Honduras due to the consequences of abortion.

According to the WHO, 220 per 100'000 unsafe abortion lead to death. If above numbers from Honduras are correct, it would mean that 1'522'727 abortions would take place in Honduras every year. In 2001 Honduras had about 1'500'000 women between 14-44 years of age. Even though this number is probably higher right now, it seems that things don't match up.

Abortion; Impunity; Public Health; IHSS; Penal Code; Private Security; Penitentiary System; UNAH; Education; and Change so that Nothing Changes

Congress will debate today the decriminalization of therapeutic abortion. Both the National and the Liberal Party oppose it. And what has become a horrible custom in these discussion, there is also in Honduras the insinuation that its somehow the woman's fault to be violated.

The civil society platform Somos Muchas published a further press release on the occasion.

According to Criterio, the peaceful protesters were attacked by anti-abortionist groups.

And the evangelical churches continue to make politics. One of its leaders claims that a "foreign agenda" is trying to impose with a lot of money abortion, same-sex marriage and more on Honduras.
