Pinu decided in its general assembly to run the election as part of the alliance of the political opposition.

According to Manuel Zelaya, the final presidential candidate for the oppositional alliance must fulfill several conditions: i) bring an International Commission against Impunity to Honduras ii) strengthen the rule of law iii) prepare the groundwork to derogate some 40 laws by the former two governments iv) lower energy/petrol prices v) stop the devaluation vi) combat death squads ...

The Christian Democrats (DC), meanwhile, join an alliance with the National Party.

As a reason the DC claimed that both parties are strong supporters of transparency, given the Secrecy Law crafted by the National Party, this probably isn't the most convincing argument.

May 1; Repression; IACHR; HRDs; Campesinxs; Water; Coca Cola; Bank Secrecy; Renewable Energy; and the Life of a Private Security Guard

Honduras' labor union and social movements took to the street yesterday on May 1 protesting against the deterioration of labor laws, but also against human rights violations by the Honduran state in general.

The protesters also rejected the presidential reelection.

Radio Progreso lists protests against the toll booths, mining and hydroelectricity as some of the main demands by the protesters.

Radio Progreso's director Ismael Moreno, meanwhile, sees a demobilization of the popular movement and he calls for a new commitment going beyond the nostalgic marches of May 1.

During the May 1 march, Libre candidate for Congress Pedro Joaquín Amador was brutally attacked by the police and arrested as he tried to support a young member by the of the National Popular Resistance Front (FNRP), who was being arrested by the police under false claims.

The police claims that Amador head-banged a police officer and this was the cause for his wound...

JOH, meanwhile, had the Casa Presidencial heavily protected, even though the official route was far away from it.

And on national television he presented himself as a defender of workers' rights.

After the Christian Democrats, it is time for UD to announce its alliance with the National Party.

Things are less clear on the side of the political opposition. While some days back, Liberal presidential candidate Luis Zelaya said that he could win against JOH even without the oppositional alliance, he now says that even with the alliance things are going to be difficult.

PAC president Salvador Nasralla unexpectedly announced that he won't be part of the alliance and that he won't even run in the general elections if the TSE insists that PAC holds internal elections on May 21.

At the same time, PAC accuses its own congressman to be in cahoots with the National Party...

Salvador Nasralla got the support by both Libre and Pinu to jointly protest the treatment by the TSE PAC. In a press release, the three parties also denounce the unwillingness by the party in power to implement the promised electoral reforms and they announce further actions for defending the right to participate.

Nasralla questions the validity of La Gaceta as the their primary election results supposedly haven't gained official recognition by being published in it.

PAC members also protested outside the TSE-

The presidential candidate of the Liberal Party, Luis Zelaya, asked for forgiveness during its general assembly for its participation in the coup d'état against Manuel Zelaya and with it he asked everyone to who left the party then to come back.

Manuel Zelaya, referring to the asking for forgiveness, calls it a "historic and noble act".

During the same assembly, the Liberal Party members gave Luis Zelaya the permission to join the alliance...if he chooses as their presidential candidate.

Hours before the decision, Salvador Nasralla told Criterio in an interview, that the alliance will choose its candidates based on who they think will move the most people to vote for her/him and who has the least votes against her/him, i.e. causes the least negative feelings.

Luis Zelaya reacted to that by saying that with our without the alliance, the Liberal Party will win in November.

Former Liberal TSE magistrate, Enrique Ortez Sequeira, thinks that the alliance should think bigger, i.e. including not only parties but other social powers, such as campesinxes, students, labor unions...

The international labor union UITA held a press conference in Tegucigalpa, after a one week visit to Honduras. They denounce the dire situation of labor rights in Honduras. For a specific case, see the following news item.

"Between April 5-7th, 2017, U.S.-based Delta Apparel fired over 40 workers that suffer from crippling musculoskeletal injuries, from their factory in Villanueva, Cortés, Honduras. Most have worked with the company for over 10 years. 25 of the 40 workers have refused to accept any settlements and are demanding that Delta Apparel give them their jobs back."

The UITA delegation also informed about the decision by the Ethical Trading Initiative (ETI) to suspend the membership of the Irish transnational company Fyffes, which is denounced for various labor rights infringements in Honduras.

JOH announced the creation of a commission to investigate the possibility to lower the age for trying minors as adults.

COIPRODEN's president Wilmer Vásquez condemns this attempt and he warns that Honduras already has the possibility to hold 12 year-old children responsible for a crime with deleterious effects.

Guadalipe Ruelas, the director of Casa Alianza, calls it a desperate act by JOH.

JOH's plan to lower the age for criminal convictions has now been officially announced in a press release by the government. It continues to be greeted by strong criticism. But, both the Catholic church and the Evangelical churches in Honduras greet the initiative - given their role in Honduras, this is sadly not surprising.

In two instances, the Association for a More Just Society (ASJ) revealed its closeness to the government. Its president Carlos Hernández defended JOH's plan to lower the age for criminal convictions. And its coordinator Omar Rivera, furthermore, tried to speak up to progress made regarding transparency to divert attention away from Honduras' failure to qualify for the Millennium Challenge Account. At the same time, ASJ, in the form of its lead investigator Lester Ramírez, is aware that some "big fish" will have to fall for the Honduran public to believe in progress in this area, something that may go against the grain of Honduras' leadership.

MACCIH; National Party; IHSS; Penal Code; Water; Public Health; Labor Unions; Penitentiary System; and a Honduran Mother's Day Gift

The controversy about MACCIH and possible pressure to block its work from the government as well as inside the institution itself continues. A good summary about the situation comes from the journalist Sandra Marybel Sánchez....

...and from Pasos de Animal Grande.

The sociologist Pablo Carías explains why and how MACCIH has been under pressure.

But this won't lead to the disappearance of MACCIH according to the academic Víctor Meza.

Carlos Patiño, a member of Caritas, wants MACCIH to "be brave" and present the names of those people trying to destabilize them.

Foprideh's president Amanda Madrid calls to the Hondurans to take back to the streets again in support of the MACCIH.

UNAH's dean Julieta Castellanos thinks that all this shines a bad light on the OAS in general and that both the OAS as well as MACCIH failed Honduras.

And that something is not good can also be seen by the reaction by the G-16. Its current president Pierre-Christian Soccoja wrote a letter to Congress' president Mauricio Oliva expressing the G-16's preoccupation about the changes made to the Clean Politics Bill.

MACCIH's press speaker Juan Jiménez Mayor promised to rectify its errors and consolidate its independence. He, furthermore, announced the arrival of two new public prosecutors.

And even OAS' president Luis Almagro joined the conversation.

Honduras saw the fourth prison break in two weeks, and the most recent one on Thursday is the biggest so far. 22 or 23 members of the Mara 18 escaped from the national prison in Támara. What is worse, the prison authorities didn't seem to notice at first and the only informed the Honduran authorities yesterday.

Omar Rivera, member of the purging committee of the police, denounces the behavior of the prison authorities.

The director of the prison was fired as a consequence.

But the problem goes deeper. 65 inmates escaped in less than two weeks.

ATIC conducted investigations at both the Támara and Amarateca prison as well as the offices of the National Penitentiary Institute.

Apparently 30 million Lempiras were found in a cell unit inside the Támara prison.

One of the inmates who had escaped was found dead in a car in Chamelecón, Cortés, with a note saying "This happens if you escape without permission".

CODEH's president Hugo Ramón Maldonado thinks that the inmates were let go on purpose as there was no tunnel, no broken walls and no use of violence. He believes that the case will be used to promote the privatization of the Honduran prison system.

The deliberation by Galel Cárdenas goes in the same direction, i.e. that they were let go on purpose.

The official version, meanwhile, is that the inmates new about a planned transport to the new El Pozo II prison and therefore bribed the guards to let them go before that would happen.

This transport now has taken place.

El Heraldo tries to present the transport as one from prison paradise to prison hell.

Meanwhile, three inmates escaped from the youth detention center Renaciendo, one of them presumably linked to the murder of journalist Igor Padilla.

Radio Progreso makes an important contribution to the debate by directing the headlights to the role of the armed forces inside the Honduran penitentiary system.

Berta - Investigation; Mining; Hydroelectricity; LGTBI; Penitentiary System; Journalists; MACCIH; Political Opposition; Murder Rate; Drug Trafficking; Penal Code; Irregularities; Social Security; Extradition; Banks; and an Unequal Race

COPINH protested outside of the MP yesterday. Together with MADJ they denounce the impunity in the case of Berta and the unwillingness by state authorities to share information with the legal team of Berta's family.

They call it "a pact of impunity" which denies them access to Berta's case files.

Criterio reports that the IACHR cited the Honduran government to present them and Berta's family the advances made in the investigation.

The Honduran Committee for Diversity denounced on yesterday's International Day Against Homophobia and Transphobia that there were already 15 murders of members of the LGTBI community in this year alone. In total they registered more than 280 murders since 2009, more than 90% of them rest unpunished.

In a march through Tegucigalpa they further protested against the violence and discrimination they face on a daily basis.

The MACCIH presented yesterday its second report to the OAS in Washington. In it the MACCIH criticize the changes made to the Clean Politics Law as they went against the spirit of the law (by this, it contradicts National Congresswo/men who claim that the changes were minor and part of normal congressional work). It also criticizes the secrecy by the Honduran government.

Criterio calls it "a diplomatic way to call for the derogation of the Secrecy Law".

Carlos Hernández, the representative of Transparency International in Honduras, joins in the debate about the situation of the MACCIH and demands a guaranteed independence for its work. But he also seems somewhat hopeful as he thinks that the discussion between the MACCIH and Congress about the need to reform the Secrecy Law is quite advanced.

Yesterday, the political opposition met to further discuss its plans for the joint alliance. Xiomara Castro, Libre's candidate, underlines the importance of this event as it establishes the disposition of the four parties to talk and improve the chance for a strong alliance.

She goes on to say that the Liberal presidential candidate Luis Zelaya shares the opinion of the alliance in 95% of the discussed topics.

Luis Zelaya also calls the start of the dialogue "an important step". The former TSE magnesite and Liberal politician Enrique Ortez urges the oppositional parties to see an alliance as something more than just a joint presidential candidate. According to him, there are more points that unite them.

Criterio published so-called "Democratic Approach by the Oppositional Political Alliance against the Dictatorship" which contains 17 points that are of great importance to the Alliance.

"OFRANEH rep and Garifuna leader César Geovanni Bernardez was detained this afternoon in La Ceiba at around 4 pm. Geovanni is being charged with usurpation or illegal possession of land by Canadian businessman Patrick Forseth of CARIVIDA. OFRANEH is particularly concerned about Geovanni because he and other Garifuna youth in Santa Fe and Guadalupe were personally threatened a few days ago by the mayor of Santa Fe who has been involved in illegal sales as well. When they were threatened, the mayor made specific reference to Geovanni's "vulnerability" referring to the fact that he knew that Geovanni travels frequently to various Garifuna communities on the coast for his work with OFRANEH. The mayor has connections inside the Honduran military."

On November 10th of last year, Medeline David, a Garifuna leader in Guadalupe was detained and tortured by the police in Trujillo for the same CARIVIDA project and the same charges as Geovanni.

Berta - Trial, EU; UN; Lencas; Penal Code; Indigenous Peoples; Military Police; MACCIH; Political Opposition; PAC; National Party; (Re)Elections; Privatization; Penitentiary System; Councilors; and Identity Cards for Inmates

The hearing in the case of Berta has been postponed to June 7. COPINH's legal representatives made the request due to the fact that they only received the necessary information by the MP to participate in the hearing on Tuesday afternoon - half a day before the hearing was planned to take place. Now they have less than two weeks, which is still too short a time, to analyze all the evidence that the public prosecutor wants to present at the hearing.

Information by COPINH

Berta's family thanked EU ambassador Ketil Karlsen for his support in the investigation and trial of Berta's assassination.

"A new report from the Offices of Inspector General (OIG) of the US

Department of Justice (DOJ) and the US State Department finds that US Drug Enforcement Agency (DEA) agents were in operational control in a notorious incident in Ahuas, Honduras in May 2012 in which four Miskitu villagers were killed and three others severely wounded. The findings contradict previous claims by DEA officials that its agents played only a "supportive" role in the incident, that "DEA agents did not fire a single round," and that "the conduct of DEA personnel was consistent with current DEA protocols, policies and procedures."

The New York Times also reports on these new revelations.

Journalists; Students' Protest; (Re)Elections; MACCIH; G-16; US; and a New Central American Alliance Against Mining

Journalist Rony Huete was hit by UNAH's private security guard and later arrested by the police while covering a student protest in solidarity with three students facing trial for usurpation (see yesterday).

As a manifestation of journalists' fate in Honduras, it was fitting that the attack and arrest of Huete took place on the Day of the Journalist.

Radio Progreso summarizes the situation of their profession as follows: "insecurity, job insecurity, censorship, selling-out and misconduct."

Omar Rivera asked for better working conditions for journalists and the derogation of Article 335B of the Penal Code.

This was also the request by the president of the Hondurans Journalists' College (CPH), Dagoberto Rodríguez. Lets just say, that Congress' president Mauricio Oliva wasn't moved by the request...

In a public forum on the new Penal Code, national and international experts agreed that there is no place for libel and slander in the Penal Code, as they are incompatible with international standards.

Another common topic was the violence journalists face on a daily basis. C-Libre's president Edy Tabora denounces an unwillingness by the MP to investigate and bring to trial assassinations of journalists.

JOH promised a new ministry for human rights which will take on the crimes against journalists.

The TSE has signed an agreement with the civil society coalition Observation-N26 allowing the latter to conduct a long-term observation of the general elections, i.e. from the call for the election to the announcement of its winner.

And they have their work cut out for them. As Honduras Culture and Politics shows, there are more than 1 million registered voters "that simply cannot not exist."

The call for the elections took place yesterday, when the TSE invited Hondurans to participate in the general elections on November 26, electing one president, 128 congresswo/men, 20 parliamentarians for the Central American Parliament (Parlacen), 298 mayors and local councilors. Yesterday the criminalizing trial against three students, Cesario Padilla, Moisés Cáceres and Sergio Ulloa, took place.

At the same time, the 21 students arrested a day before, in a solidarity protest with them, all received alternatives measures to imprisonment, i.e. they have to sign a sheet every Friday at the court, they aren't allowed to leave the country and they aren't allowed to approach UNAH's administrative building.

UNAH; MACCIH; (Re)Elections; Penitentiary System; and Human Security, Not Militarization

three students facing trial for usurpation.

Meanwhile, Pasos de Animal Grande continues to report on the trial against the 20 students and one journalist arrested on Thursday. Carlo Jiménez, a lawyer from C-Libre representing them, denounced an irregularity in due diligence and another lawyer, Mario Rojas, speaks of a misuse of criminal law.

Tragedy; Penitentiary Systems; JOH; and How Honduras Became the Banana Republic

Yesterday afternoon, four people lost their lives and more than 20 were hurt when too many people tried to get in the National Stadium in Tegucigalpa for the soccer final.

The Security Secretariat claims that too many tickets were sold on the black market.

And they also recommended to the clubs not to cancel the game.

ConfidencialHN, meanwhile, also blames the police for its disproportionate use of force.
