In October 1998, Honduras was ravaged by Hurricane Mitch. Expediente Público spoke with the Honduran political analyst Manuel Torres Calderón who wrote a book about it. He posits that "Hurricane Mitch broke the economic and social model that the State of Honduras had installed since 1990, «in that year the country initiated the neoliberal adjustment model, which included privatizations of the public sector, triggering greater inequality; in 1990 56% of the population was poor, in 1998 it was 69%»."

The migrant caravan arrived in the Mexican state of Veracruz. There they split up in various groups after the mayor of Veracruz did not come through with a promise to offer them buses to Mexico City.

Sandra Cuffe portrays a Honduran migrant currently on the way to the US in one of the now several migrant caravan. "Billy Noe Martinez was less 150km from the US-Mexico border eight years ago when his journey came to an abrupt stop. A group of men abducted Martinez, along with other migrants he was travelling with, at gunpoint, took them to a ranch, and lined them up with their face against a wall. The gunmen then shot them one-by-one. Standing at the end of the line, Martinez managed to escape through a window, hiding submerged in a river until the gunfire ended, he said."

Anna-Catherine Brigida writing for the Washington Post believes that migrating in large groups may become the new normal. "Traveling in groups is perceived as safer and cheaper for migrants, who often pay $7,000 to $10,000 to smugglers called coyotes to avoid the dangers of crossing Mexico. Migrants do not pay to join a caravan, and many travel without much cash, to avoid being robbed. Rather than carry many provisions, members of the caravan often rely on the generosity of people along the way to feed them."

The former Attorney General Edmundo Orellana published his analysis of Trump's statement accusing the JOH regime of misusing US money (see yesterday). "Beyond what is manifestly a transgression of the most elementary norms of diplomacy, Trump's denunciation places the Honduran government, which he has highlighted in his accusation, in a very uncomfortable position before the world and in risk that the dreaded Magnitsky Law will be applied to its highest officials."

The journalist Jairo López was detained yesterday. While he should benefit from the Honduran protection mechanism, the arresting officers violently beat him in front of his wife and daughter. López has been accompanying as a journalist the bi-weekly protests against the Energy Company Honduras (EEH) in Choluteca. Today, COPINH will host the forum "The Truth about the Berta Cáceres Case" at UNAH. It is a reaction to their exclusion from the trial and to present findings about the criminal structure that murdered Berta which the court did not want to look into. The forum will be live-streamed. COPINH published an interview with the lawyer Reynaldo Villalba Vargas, who forms part of the Expert Observation Mission of the Berta Cáceres Case.

Radio Progreso published a critical overview of the discussions about a popular consultation. The article highlights the real intention of the National Party; they do not want to ask the people if they are in favor or against the presidential reelection, rather they just want them to regulate it and whitewash JOH's illegal reelection.

There is also a growing fear, that it may come to an impunity pact between the National Party, the Liberal Party and Libre.

Yesterday, the forum "The Truth about the Berta Cáceres Case" took place in a full lecture hall at UNAH. COPINH published three videos from the forum and accompanied with an informative Twitter stream. Human rights scholar Joaquín Mejía concludes about the Berta Cáceres case: "The cases of Blanca Jeannette Kawas, Carlos Antonio Luna, Carlos Escaleras Mejía, Margarita Murillo and Berta Cáceres, among others, are a reflection of that structural impunity that as a cancer has evicted the rule of law and its justice system, and that we, as citizens, must articulate the various efforts to eradicate it and build an inclusive and democratic nation."

32 EU Parliamentarians sent a public letter to JOH and the High Representative for Foreign Affairs and Security Policy Federica Mogherini expressing their concern regarding the Berta Cáceres trial. "The trial must be conducted in full respect of the principles of impartiality and access to justice. This case is key to the defense of human rights in Honduras and throughout the Latin American region." While international pressure seems to grow, the JOH regime and its allies at the Judicial Power continue to ignore their calls for due process. Journalist Nina Lakhani highlights the following: "last Wednesday we were told the #BertaCáceres murder trial was suspended until 9am today [Tuesday]. Turns out the case continued yesterday with a largely empty public gallery. We missed key phone evidence related to defendant Sergio Rodriguez, dam company communities manager. Why?" "Not just Rodriguez, we missed the phone evidence of several key defendants inc ex-security chief Geovanny Bustillo. It cannot be a coincidence that international observers & press were absent on the day evidence against an alleged mastermind & coordinator of the murder presented"

The UN-facilitated national dialogue is about to end this Friday. Salvador Nasralla publicly stated that there will not be any "ground-breaking agreements". UN-representative Igor Garafulic is more optimistic and he reiterates that there is a draft bill for an amnesty for the political prisoners. Honduras Daily: Berta - Trial; Women Rights Femicide; Mining - Guapinol; Journalists; MACCIH; Caravan; US; RNP; Corruption - JOH; and the Dialogue Labored and Brought Forth a Mouse

The UN expert commission having visited Honduras for two weeks (see below), also commented on the Berta Cáceres trial: "A number of interlocutors expressed a great dissatisfaction with the trial for Berta Cáceres murder, including the members of her family. We heard that the family has been denied access to reports and evidence during the investigation phase, which lasted more than two years and was marred by numerous irregularities, and that the lawyers representing the family were excluded from the trial without being given a legitimate reason. This trial is emblematic of the lack of transparency and unfair legal processes faced by women's human rights defenders, which is of great concern to our Working Group. We urge the Government to take all the measures to secure justice for the family and ensure that the trial respects international standards. Any irregularities reflect badly on the judiciary which is already mistrusted for its lack of accountability in spite of the real efforts of the Supreme Court and other institutions to improve access to justice for women. Moreover, impunity for killings and other crimes committed against women fuel further violence against them."

<https://www.ohchr.org/EN/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=23873&LangID=E>

A UN expert commission visited Honduras for 14 days to investigate the human rights situation of women. They conclude that 'although there have been some advances, the Central American country remains "macho". Women are victims of "generalized violence" and inequality. In addition, they suffer from a lack of political representation.'

Their report made important comments on the situation of WHRDs: "Although Honduras has made efforts to establish an effective mechanism of protection for human rights defenders, there still seems to be little understanding of the specificities and needs of women human rights defenders and hurdles they face. All of the women we spoke to said they were not able to operate in a safe and enabling environment.²⁷

They told us that they face numerous attacks and threats, as well as criminalization of their activities and lack of access to justice.

Stigmatization by officials, and also by their own organizations, families, communities and the media, not only disempowers them but also exposes them to heightened risks. They face smear campaigns aimed at discrediting their work, often being identified as being anti-development of Honduras, 'unnatural' mothers and wives or even criminals. One defender told us how not only had she been criminalized, attacked by members of her own community, but has been constantly harassed and insulted by members of her family for being a bad mother. With great passion she told us how even if she is riddled with pain and guilt, she is defending her land, which is being taken by an agrobusiness, precisely because she is worried that her children will not have a future in her region; she thinks this makes her a good mother. We also received testimonies of women human rights defenders facing legal actions for defamation and slander, as well as the threat thereof. Others have reported that their organizations are subjected to unreasonable tax supervision and registration requirements. We are also told that women who are more vocal are at risk of harsher treatment, including excessive use of force and even murder."

<https://news.un.org/es/story/2018/11/1445741>

<https://www.ohchr.org/EN/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=23873&LangID=E>

During the visit of the expert commission, 13 Honduran women were murdered. According to the Violence Observatory, 309 femicide took place in Honduras so far this year.

The Coalition against Impunity held a press conference on the situation in Guapinol after having visited the community. They conclude that "the concession of the extractive mining projects ASP 1 and ASP 2, granted in favor of the company Inversiones Pinares, owned by Mr. Lenir Pérez, is the product of irregular and corrupt legislative practices to favor territorial dispossession by private companies."

The press conference was accompanied by various people from the affected communities. Juana Zúñiga, a member of the Commons Committee of Guapinol, denounced that soldiers are intimidating them and that the community is falsely presented as a vandals.

They demand a town hall meeting to declare the area free of mining. ConexiHon shines an important light on the difficulty of journalist reporting in such a context.

Reporting on the migrant caravan, InSight Crime writes that it "has changed its intended route to avoid the Texas-Mexico border — a move that shows even such a large group remains vulnerable to powerful criminal organizations operating in Mexico. The caravan now aims to reach the United States by way of Tijuana, instead of through the Mexican state of Tamaulipas, which borders Texas, the Los Angeles Times reported. The migrants, which left Honduras in October, have rerouted onto the much longer but safer path toward California, to avoid one of the most dangerous Mexican states for migrants." The Trump administration, meanwhile, continues to further militarize its borders.

Natalie Roque Sandoval published an important comment on Trump's threats to cut US aid to Honduras concluding: "We live in a huge tragedy and it is partly thanks to US aid. While some US aid also has come with a more palliative character, nevertheless, compared to the damage caused, it is a band aid on massive wounds. And the corrupted governments steal a great deal (That is correctly stated by Trump). It is necessary to make a balance and compare the numbers. However, I still think that there is no "aid" that can pay back the many blows and so much spilled blood."

Honduras Daily: Berta - Trial, DESA; Mining - Guapinol; Caravan - US, Children; Women's Rights; Journalists; LGBTI; Liberal Party; Political Opposition; National Dialogue, Drug Trafficking; Corruption - de Lobo; and Drunk Uncle Sam

NACLA published a welcome overview in English by Jackie McVicar about the Berta Cáceres trial. "The trial against Berta Cáceres' accused assassins has been riddled with irregularities and bias—and barred the victims' lawyers from participation. It is a tragic lost opportunity for justice in Honduras."

A similar overview, but in Spanish, was written by Fernando Silva for ContraCorriente.

The trial continues this morning at 9am.

Omar Menjivar Rosales concentrates in his article on the role of DESA. "Thus, using this criminal mixture between private operators and state officials and servants, that criminal structure called DESA, which has a legal facade as a mercantile society, planned and executed the murder of Berta Cáceres and they are sure that they will go unpunished. But they did not count with the determination of the people that Berta defended and that of millions of people in the world who are determined to demand here and wherever, for whatever period of time, and until it is realized, their right to the truth, to justice, to non-repetition and punishment for murderers."

DESA, through its PR representative Amsterdam & Partners LLP, started a new defamatory campaign against COPINH.

Criterio reports that a first group of 1500 migrants arrived at the US border.

Jackie McVicar spoke with Honduran journalist Bartolo Fuentes and HRD Joaquin Mejia about why Hondurans flee their country and joined the migrant caravan.

<https://www.americamagazine.org/politics-society/2018/11/07/why-are-so-many-people-fleeing-honduras>

A further analysis of the push-factors comes from Juan Almendarez. "The purpose of this essay is to point out two aspects of reality that are related to migration, the first one refers to peasant, indigenous and Garífuna communities, linked to the territories and aspiring to defend their social and political spaces in front of capitalist accumulation by dispossession; on the other hand, a new phenomenon in Honduras is the massive, collective migrations of sectors that do not endure the conditions of exploitation and social inequality in the countryside and that migrate to the cities to emigrate mainly to the United States of America. In this way, we place this problem in the geopolitical framework of the US military occupation of Honduras."

The US chargé d'affaires, meanwhile, launched a new social media campaign asking Hondurans to stay in or to return to Honduras.

Currently, the trial against Joaquín "El Chapo" Guzmán takes place in New York. Already on the second day of the trial, information pertinent to Honduras came to light. Guzmán's lawyer testified that a witness already in the hands of the US had sent to kill a Honduran public prosecutor and he was also involved in an assassination plan of a former Honduran president.

The lawyer also said that bribes were paid to a Honduran president. Manuel Zelaya demands the extradition of the witness.

As the judicial farce that is the Berta Cáceres case continues, the Expert Observation Mission of the Berta Cáceres Case felt compelled to publish another press release in a bit more than a week. They express their "deep concern that on November 12th a hearing took place without previously informing the victims of the case, which adds to a series of irregularities that have been denounced since the beginning of the process". In yesterday's hearing, the focus was on the phone records of the accused. TN5 reports that the phone records showed that Mariano Díaz Chávez knew about the assassination plan. The trial will continue this morning.

"In the EU, export controls are a regulatory tool to allow government agencies to control the proliferation of "dual-use" tools and technologies. In September 2016 the EU Commission published its draft proposal for an improved export controls regime, seeking to modernise and simplify the existing system to limit the spread of technology used for surveillance. After the promising position of the European Parliament, member states are attempting to block curbs on the export of surveillance equipment to abusive regimes. Honduras Daily: Berta - Trial, EU; Repression; Corruption - Congress, de Lobo; IMF; Economy; Liberal Party; National Police; National Dialogue; Religion; and a New Dawn

A first ruling is expected in the Berta Cáceres trial in the coming days. A delegation by CEJIL traveled to Honduras to further accompany Berta's family and COPINH in their quest for truth and justice. CEJIL denounces once more that the trial has been riddled with irregularities and as a consequence, no integral justice can be expected from it. "The achieved sentence will be insufficient and will only be a first step in this case, because neither the family nor COPINH nor the organizations that have supported their struggle will cease our demand for justice for Berta Cáceres."

The spokesperson of the EU's Foreign Secretary Federica Mogherini published a press release on the Berta Cáceres case. "We expect that the rule of law, human rights and the independence of the judiciary are safeguarded and underline the need for the trial to be transparent and public. The rights to be represented and to access to information, including the families' right to private representation, are key in this context."

Yesterday, worrisome intentions by Congress, in the name of the head of the Nationalist Party Mario Pérez, came to light and cause an outcry. It was made public that Congress wanted to change Article 218 of the Constitution giving it more power by withdrawing the right of the president to veto laws. The lawyer René Adán Tomé denounced that this should be seen as a further attempt by congressmen to protect themselves from corruption investigations.

Gabriela Castellanos, director of the National Anti-Corruption Council (CNA), labeled Congress as "an impunity creating monster". After this wave of criticism, Pérez withdrew the bill.

Honduras Daily: Berta - Trial; HRDs - Protection Mechanism; JOH - Drug Trafficking, US; Caravan - US; National Dialogue; National Party; Corruption - Pandora, Health Secretariat; Public Health; and Violence against Women

Today, the conclusions in the first trial of the Berta Cáceres case against 8 accused will be presented today. The decisions by the judges will take a bit longer, but are expected before the holidays of the judiciary start on December 15. As has been highlighted in innumerable links in this newsletter, COPINH, Berta's family as well as national and international human rights organizations have denounced several irregularities and do not expect the outcome of this first trial to bring forward integral justice.

COPINH published a presentation of the planned execution of Berta and a short video summarizing their findings.

Up to this point, it was mostly the former president, Porfirio Lobo, who made headlines with arrested relatives (his wife, his son and his brother). Now it also touches JOH as his brother, Juan Antonio "Tony" Hernández was arrested in Miami for "conspiring to import cocaine". The arrest dominated Honduras' media landscape today. JOH's office issued a statement Friday evening confirming the arrest reiterating previous remarks from JOH that the accused deserve the presumption of innocence, but that no man is above the law. He also recognized that it is a severe blow for him and his family. The arrest goes back to statements made by the head of the Los Cachiros drug cartel Devis Leonel Rivera Madariaga in March in a New York court. The president of the Liberal Party, Luis Zelaya, tweeted that "I only believe in US and divine justice". Libre's Mel Zelaya is more skeptical.

Pasos de Animal Grande published an important article on the role of Congress in producing laws to protect themselves and other state functionaries from corruption investigations.

The Pandora corruption case found its way back into the headlines. Omar Menjívar, the lawyer of the accused Fernando Suárez, made public that Suárez confessed in court that JOH and his deceased sister were the heads behind the corruption case. In the words of Menjívar: "What happened was the result of the decision, planning, execution, supervision of a criminal organization that unfortunately is the one that directs the State of Honduras and that criminal organization had an executive direction and that executive direction was exercised by none other than Hilda Hernández, by delegation, knowledge of the current president of the Republic. They are the leaders of this."

JOH demands proof and appeals to the assumption of innocence. Suárez, meanwhile, remains in custody at ATIC, not in a prison for security reasons.

COPINH published the statement by Laura Zúñiga Cáceres held as the trial ended last week. It is a powerful statement of a daughter who lost her mother and together with others continues her struggle. "Today it's up to me to speak, something I don't want to do because no one wants to talk after their mother has been murdered, it's up to me to speak because this justice system didn't allow us to participate in this process, it expelled us. (...) And today, unfortunately, justice is indebted to us, but that doesn't mean we are going to ignore the fact that there are guilty people in this room. Not all are guilty, but here there are hitmen, here there is necessary collaboration, here there are persecutors, there are infiltrators and we have to say it. (...) I'm not going to say more, but even if it is only for this moment, thank you, because unfortunately, this was the only time that we were able to express ourselves in this entire process. The struggle for justice for Berta Cáceres does not end here. There are more judicial processes that we will continue with, and we will keep appealing to these institutions so that they act in the way a justice system should act.

We are not passive victims. We will act because Berta Cáceres deserves it, because the Lenca People deserve it, because they keep persecuting us even now because this criminal structure that killed Berta Cáceres is still active and we will also denounce that."

Hondurans took to the street to commemorate the one-year anniversary of the 2017 electoral fraud and the following post-electoral repression. State security forces once more reacted with violence. They used tear gas and live bullets. Several citizens were wounded, among them the UNETV journalist Geovanny Sierra. He was shot at and had to be hospitalized.

Apparently, he has been shot from someone inside a bus belonging to the National Penitentiary Institute (INP). A press release by the Security Secretariat denied that state security forces shot at protesters - it is 2017 all over again.

Later the same night, the INP also emitted a press release, suddenly changing the narrative. They unconvincingly claim that protesters tried to free inmates transported in their bus and this is why they had to shoot at them...

According to the Washington Post, the number of mostly Honduran migrants who recently arrived in Tijuana has reached 7400. On Sunday, tired after their exhausting journey and facing an unknown future waiting in Mexico, some organized to protest at the US border. As a group tried to cross the border, they were repressed with tear gas and the US closed one of the busiest ports along the US border with Mexico.

https://www.washingtonpost.com/world/the_americas/us-closes-major-crossing-as-caravan-migrants-mass-at-border-in-mexico/2018/11/25/f94aabe0-f0ea-11e8-99c2-cfcfa6fcf610c_story.html?utm_term=.f289479b7c2d

Sandra Cuffe dedicates an article to last year's post-electoral repression as a source of Honduran migration. "The bullet hole in Junior Rivera's neighbour's garage door was just one of many in the Lopez Arellano sector of Choloma, in northwestern Honduras. Military police shot live ammunition during repeated crackdowns on local highway blockades by residents protesting what they called "election fraud". "This is the sector that was the worst hit by the repression," Rivera, an opposition alliance political activist (...) Six Lopez Arellano residents were shot and killed in when security forces attacked local highway blockades in the month following the elections. The government and military denied responsibility for any post-election killings."

InSight Crime picked up the arrest of JOH's brother Tony Hernández. They conclude: "It's unclear what Antonio Hernández's arrest means for US-Honduras relations. President Hernández is the United States' main ally in Central America. The North American nation backed Hernández even after his bitterly contested reelection victory was marred by allegations of electoral fraud.

At home, President Hernández is already in the crosshairs of anti-corruption prosecutors in the Attorney General's Office and the internationally-backed Support Mission Against Corruption and Impunity in Honduras (Misión de Apoyo contra la Corrupción y la Impunidad en Honduras - MACCIH) regarding his alleged role in diverting millions of dollars of public money for political purposes.

The United States is one of the major funders of the MACCIH, but it remains to be seen if the arrest of the president's brother and the ongoing investigation into Hernández's alleged criminal activity will alter the relationship of the two nations."

In the US, meanwhile, both the DEA and the Department of Justice emitted press release on his arrest with further information about the scope of his drug trafficking activities. The DEA writes that "[a]s stated in the unsealed indictment resulting from DEA's investigation, from at least in or about 2004, up to and including in or about 2016, multiple drug-trafficking organizations in Honduras and elsewhere worked together, and with support from certain prominent public and private individuals. These included Honduran politicians and law enforcement officials, who received multi-ton loads of cocaine sent to Honduras from, among other places, Colombia via air and maritime routes, in order to transport the drugs westward in Honduras toward the border with Guatemala and eventually to the United States. For protection from official interference, and in order to facilitate the safe passage through Honduras of multi-hundred-kilogram loads of cocaine, drug traffickers paid bribes to public officials, including certain members of the National Congress of Honduras, according to DEA's investigation."

El Pulso speaks with political analyst Raúl Pineda about the drug-trafficking-politicians-nexus in Honduras.

To divert attention away from this, the JOH regime published a press release highlighting their "successful" anti-drug trafficking efforts.

Radio Progreso lauds the work and the courage of the lawyers Omar Menjívar and Luis Javier Santos, the first working for civil society organizations, the latter is the head of UFECIC. Both have made headlines lately in their quest to bring a corruption case to the public involving JOH (see Monday's e-mail).

The CNA handed over "hundreds of files regarding presumed acts of corruptions by high-level state officials" to UFECIC.

Óscar Esquivel presents the currently discussed corruption cases in Honduras (Pandora, IHSS, the one against the former first lady and the one against the brother of the former president) as a possibility for "capable and honorable" politicians to enter the scene and create with an awakening public a real republic with independent state powers and free of foreign interference.

This renewed repression is one sign of why the National Dialogue has failed in Honduras according to Radio Progreso. "Almost a year after these events, all the political forces participating in the dialogue and the population in general, have realized that this platform was useless, that it was a resounding failure and that the political crisis is more alive than ever, with a validated and consolidated fraud and with violators of human rights in freedom and in total impunity."

Expecting a verdict in the Berta Cáceres trial for today at 4pm, international coverage has grown again. Yesterday I already linked to an El País article, today there is more coverage by Democracy Now!. They spoke with US Honduran expert Dana Frank about the trial. OACNUDH and the IACHR published a joint press release expressing their "concern about the exclusion of the victim's representation and unwarranted delays in the process". They also highlight the need to go after the intellectual authors. These intellectual authors are still not on trial, as COPINH just reiterated with a new article called "The Atalas are Missing".

The concurrence of the anniversary of the electoral fraud (see first link below for a message of solidarity by the Honduras Solidarity Network) and the arrest of JOH's brother Tony Hernández in the US for drug trafficking (see also second link below) have reignited widespread protests and demands for JOH to step down.

Radio Progreso published an article whose title just says that, "Step Down". Radio Progreso goes on to call for unity to join forces in demanding his resignation.

The student body has already taken up this call, protesting at UNAH. Two police agents infiltrated the protests, but were detected by the students. State security forces then repress them with tear gas.

The police unconvincingly claims that the two police infiltrators had their day off and just by accident landed inside the protest...

Libre published a press release calling out to the Honduran people join in their demand for the resignation of JOH.

On Wednesday, Libre and Pinu congresswo/men were stopped to present a motion in Congress to create a special commission investigating the link between JOH and drug trafficking (see yesterday's e-mail). Yesterday, continued to put pressure on in Congress.

The Social Citizen Platform of Honduras demands an immediate resignation of JOH and as well as an investigation of him. And even the president of the Journalists Association Honduras (CPH), Dagoberto Rodríguez, wrote on Twitter that JOH lost any remaining credibility.

Democracy Now! spoke with Dana Frank not only about the Berta Cáceres trial (see above), but also about the US roots of the Honduran migrant caravan. "When you read the interviews or the mainstream news reports about why the migrants in the caravan are fleeing, they will say, "Well, they are fleeing gangs and violence and poverty." And that's true, but what's missing from that narrative is where the gangs and violence and poverty come from. It's not a natural disaster. It's actually the result of the deliberate policies of this government that came to the successive post—what we call the post-regime governments that came to power in the aftermath of the coup, most recently the illegal government of Juan Orlando Hernández. (...) So it is not just random violence. It is a U.S.-backed regime that is in cahoots with this. For example, a lot of people are fleeing gangs, or small business people are—their businesses are being destroyed by gang taxes. The police are very much cooperating with the gangs in extracting those kinds of so-called war taxes that the gang members charge. So it is this lawlessness that then opens the door for this kind of terror that people are fleeing, and the government is very much part of that terror."

C-Libre held a forum on the right to information by citizens in Honduras. Defensores en Línea concludes that "[n]ational and international experts agreed that the right of Honduran citizens to know public information is denied by excessive controls and secrecy, applied to issues such as security, defense, state contracting and mining and hydroelectric concessions, among other topics of national interest".

Honduras Daily: Berta - Verdict, US; HRDs; JOH; Drug Trafficking - JOH; Political Prisoners; Journalists; Corruption - Pandora, HR; Public Health; Electric Energy; Congress; and Teenage Pregnancies

Three and a half years after the murder of Berta Cáceres, yesterday afternoon the verdict against the presumed eight material authors was presented. Seven men were found guilty of murdering Berta, four of them were additionally found guilty of attempted murder of the Mexican HRD Gustavo Castro. As the only one, Emerson Duarte Meza was acquitted. The official sentencing will take place on January 10.

The verdict further confirmed the role of DESA in the murder led lawyer Víctor Fernández to conclude that the trial showed that DESA is guilty. COPINH and Berta's family stated that the verdict did not satisfy their demands for justice as the court failed to include the intellectual authorship in the trial. "This ruling that has been pronounced in the First Chamber of the Sentencing Court that condemns the group of hitmen and the intermediate structure directly related to the company DESA does not mean that justice has been achieved. The structures and people who gave the money to kill Berta Cáceres continue to enjoy the freedom and the possibility of masterminding crimes like this without being unpunished. (...) With the chapter that closes today, the condemnations of the lowest link of the criminal structure with which the Honduran State intends to silence the demand for justice, does not end the fight for justice for Berta Cáceres and the Lenca people, on the contrary, it deepens our efforts."

COPINH and Berta's family also held a press conference outside the court (see 5th link).

The calls for JOH's resignation continue to be heard in Honduras (see also yesterday's e-mail). Omar Menjívar believes that the anti-corruption body of the MP, UFECIC, has enough proof to go after JOH. Liberal president Luis Zelaya writes that JOH's resignation is "imperative for the good of Honduras".

Criterio columnist Jaime Flores describes Tony Hernández's arrest as a liver punch ("gancho al hígado), not a knock-out, but a heavy blow which needs to be followed by an impeachment as well as an investigation. Radio Progreso, meanwhile, looks at the leadership of the National Party and concludes that "as the year comes to an end, it is confirmed that we are led by a group of people, who in themselves are the drivers of organized crime in the country".

According to Rodolfo Pastor Fasquelle, there are still many challenges for real change. "Our predicament is deeper than it seems at first sight and more difficult to overcome."

Honduras Daily: Berta - Verdict, DESA Investigation; JOH; Journalists; Mining - Guapinol; Hydroelectricity; Corruption - Pandora; Caja Chica; Judicial System; National Police; and a Cultural Crime

Thursday's reading of the verdict in the Berta Cáceres trial was internationally covered. It is to be welcomed that the New York Times and others also highlighted the irregularities that accompanied the trial as well as its limits for the failure to go after the intellectual authors.

This second point, the demand for the prosecution of the intellectual authors, was also reiterated by OACNUDH as well as US Senator Patrick Leahy. The latter writes that "[o]nly when all those responsible are held to account - those who conceived of the crime and gave the orders, those who paid the assassins, and those who participated in the cover-up

- will justice have been served for Berta Caceres."

CEJIL, just as the lawyer Víctor Fernández on Thursday, finds that the verdict "finds proof of criminal structure behind her murder". DESA, meanwhile, called the trial "a politically motivated farce".

The ongoing protests against the electoral fraud, even one year later, combined with the arrest of Tony Hernández in the US led many to believe that something is afoot in Honduras. Political analyst and former National congressman Raúl Pineda states that between December and February Honduran politics will be further stirred up and it may lead to the resignation of JOH. Possible sources may be the Pandora case or the new demands of extradition by the US including high officials or politicians. Pineda also believes that the political opposition in Honduras is too weak to get rid of JOH - only exogenous factors may lead to his resignation, especially the US.

In an OpEd for Criterio, Javier San Vicente writes of JOH as having water up to his neck.
