CESPAD dedicates an article to the glaring impunity in the cases of the murdered protesters by state security forces during the 2017/2018 post-electoral protests. "Almost 2 years have passed since more than 30 Hondurans were killed in the midst of the post-electoral crisis, by elements of the army and the police. However, only 2 cases have been brought to trial, the rest remains in impunity. (...) More than 50 crimes are counted during the protests after the coup d'état in 2009; more than 30 during the post-electoral crisis and another 9 so far from the protests of the population against the privatization of health and education (May to June 2019). The actions of the government is censored, national and internationally, for the negligence in the investigation of these crimes."

Radio Progreso sees two things reconfirmed by the current crisis. "[T]he Armed Forces are one of the fundamental pillars that sustain the authoritarian regime of Juan Orlando Hernández" and "their demonstrations of brute force against citizen protests in the streets, at the National Autonomous University of Honduras and on the day that marked the decade of the coup d'état, reflect at the same time the weakness of the regime in the face of its lack of democratic legitimacy". Radio Progreso then concludes that "[t]herefore, before the exhaustion of the political transition that began almost 40 years ago, it is imperative that, in the agenda of a new stage of transition, the disappearance of the Armed Forces is a central point and a condition for the democratization of the country".

Honduras Daily: Political Prisoners; LGBTQ; Public Sector - Dialogue, Repression, IACHR, Denigration; Violence; Corruption - Pandora, Health Sector; Indigenous Peoples; Impunity; Electoral Reforms; IMF; Children's Rights; and a Honduran AMLO?

The Committee for the Release of the Political Prisoners, the Convergence Against Continuity and the Latin American labor union Rel-UITA held a press conference in front of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP) where they denounced and condemned the risky situation in which the three social leaders Edwin Robelo Espinal, Raúl Álvarez and Rommel Baldemar Herrera Portillo are held in prison for political reasons.

Juan Carlos Herrera, father of political prisoner Herrera Portillo, publicly announced that he holds JOH and the National Penitentiary Institute (INP) responsible if something were to happen to his son.

"In consequence, the signatory organizations demand from the prison authorities: Adopt the necessary measures to guarantee the life and personal integrity of Edwin Robelo Espinal, Raúl Eduardo Álvarez and Rommel Baldemar Herrera. Taking into consideration the raising risk to the life and personal integrity as a result of the circumstances surrounding the deprivation of liberty of political prisoners, as well as the need to safeguard such rights, the competent authorities adopt, in light of the applicable standards, alternative measures to the deprivation of liberty as a means to safeguard their rights, or make effective their transfer to a center of greater security for their lives."

The same day, some 276 inmates were transferred in between prisons.

COPINH denounces that an important witness in the Berta Cáceres case was murdered. Olvin Gustavo García Mejía was found dead on June 4 after having disappeared 6 days earlier. In the past, he had been denounced on several occasions as a hitman hired by DESA to murder Berta Cáceres. David Castillo had even called him "our best insurance" in a text message to Sergio Rodríguez.

Amnesty International reacts to the ongoing repression in Honduras. "The government of President Juan Orlando Hernández has adopted a policy of repression against those who protest in the streets to demand his resignation and accountability for the actions of authorities. The use of military forces to control demonstrations across the country has had a deeply concerning toll on human rights, said Amnesty International upon presenting the findings of a field investigation. (...) Amnesty International's Americas crisis team conducted a rapid response mission during the first week of July, following the upsurge in violence during demonstrations of the last few weeks, which left a toll of six people dead and almost 80 injured. The organization documented a total of eight cases, two of which involved people killed by the army and military police, and six that involved people who were injured, four of them by firearms. In addition, the organization analyzed more than 60 pieces of audio-visual and photographic material to identify the weapons and ammunition used, among other things."

Given the situation in Honduras, CNN felt compelled to report about it. "Dead protesters, a "failed state" and accusations of high-level drug trafficking. This time it's not Venezuela in the headlines, but key US ally Honduras. Protests over the last two months have left at least three people dead and are contributing to a growing political crisis for President Juan Orlando Hernandez. The recent 10-year anniversary of the coup that deposed President Jose Manuel Zelaya in 2009 provided a focal point for protesters, who are angry about many of the same issues -- such as insecurity, poverty and a crisis of governance -- that are also a factor in driving growing migration to the United States."

Avispa Midia published a thorough report on the militarization in southern Mexico and Central America. In the case of Honduras, it is a US-supported version of militarization.

A recent instance of this was a two-week training on security forces techniques and procedures by U.S. Army National Guard members. "This was Security Forces Training and we interacted with the Honduran military and taught them a little bit about our techniques," said U.S. Army Capt. Hermon Rivera, SFT Honduras officer in charge. "During the last 14 days, we were training the Honduran

Army in different tasks including clearing rooms, weapons qualification, vehicle searches and tactical control points.”

The head of the Honduran army, meanwhile, said that the militarization of Honduras is a necessity for the country.

The Center for Strategies and International Studies in Washington DC. will hold a discussion next Wednesday on "Lessons Learned from CICIG and MACCIH to Combat Corruption and Promote the Rule of Law".

At the same time, discussions are taking place between the OAS and the JOH regime regarding the future of the MACCIH. The civil society Provisional Committee of the Penal Justice System Observatory of Honduras emitted a press release demanding transparency in the discussions and the renewal of the mandate.

In this context, the US ambassador to the OAS is also traveling to Honduras.

ConfidencialHN claims that the JOH regime wants to pull all the remaining teeth of the MACCIH and renew the contract with a body meant more or less for offering workshops.

The murder of three trans women in less than a week in Honduras has widespread reactions and repudiation.

The German Foreign office published a press release demanding a swift and thorough investigation and a better protection for human rights defenders and especially the LGBTQ community.

The Honduran Human Rights Secretariat also published a press release.

The U embassy reacted to it on social media insisting that the authorities investigate the crimes and improve the security of the LGBTQ community.

The MP informs about the initial hearing against two suspects of the latest murder.

Avispa writes about the increase in hate crimes against the LGBTQ community in Honduras culminating in three assassinations in less than a week this July. Speaking with Donny Reyes of the Association Arcoíri, he highlights one of the main sources of violence. "We have done some research throughout our organizational life. And through the investigations it has emerged that those who commit the greatest number of crimes towards the LGBTI community are those linked to the Armed Forces or State Security Forces. That is, from an investigation we did on 171 cases that we had, 61% had been committed by state security forces: the National Police, the investigation police, the army."

Peoples Dispatch reports on the recent murder of Olvin Gustavo García Mejía. "The Civic Council of Popular and Indigenous Organizations of Honduras (COPINH) reported that on July 5 that Olvin Gustavo García Mejía was found dead in the San Bartolo community, in the north region of the Intibucá department. García Mejía was an unofficial employee of the Desarrollos Energéticos S.A. (DESA) company and allegedly carried out their dirty work of threats, intimidation and even selective assassinations in order to pave the way for the construction of their hydroelectric project, Agua Zarca. COPINH released copies of chats between DESA executives David Castillo and Sergio Rodríguez calling García Mejía their "best security at the dam". In a communique, COPINH said that "With the death of Olvin García Mejía, a key witness is buried and the truth about the plans of the DESA company to assassinate Berta Cáceres are hidden.""

Radio Progreso published an important short explanation of the discussions around the electoral reforms. "What then is behind the anguished desires and purposes of these sectors and obscure characters for the approval of the so-called electoral reforms? In our Honduran case, the elections, instead of being synonymous with democracy, have become, at least in the case of the last three electoral contests, an instrument that legitimizes the power of the strong, the corrupt, the criminal and the unpunished. And today, they need to repair that process with a few tweaks and stories that they call reforms, in order to suit the so-called international community, and thus continue deceiving the unwary".

Proceso Digital, meanwhile, reports on the possibility to temporarily elect new TSE magistrates until the electoral reforms are approved. Some weeks ago, the current magistrates were confirmed in their position under protest by the political opposition and civil society organizations.

National, regional and international human rights organizations condemn in a joint press release the ongoing repression in Honduras highlighting the attacks against children and youth protesting for a better Honduras.

COFADEH explains the importance of student movements to struggle against state oppression. "The police don't like students, especially the one that protects the dictatorship of the imposter and his criminal cartel. In general, despots do not like organized youth because they are independent, they are not afraid and because they represent the new energy of the homeland. In the last 50 years in Latin America, high school and university students unfortunately headed the lists of tortured, disappeared and murdered people. The youth suffers from the disastrous state of the country inherited by corrupt adults, criminals and drug traffickers. It hurts them more than anyone. And they face brute force for their future, risking everything in the present."

The most recent attack was against children at the CIIE, an institution of the National Pedagogical University Francisco Morazán (UPNFM). The Platform for the Defense of Education and Healthcare denounce that they suffered emotional and psychological stress.

The platform now demands the destitution of Security Minister Julián Pacheco.

Reporteros de Investigación spoke with IACHR Special Rapporteur on Freedom of Expression, Edison Lanza, about the situation in Honduras. He voiced dismay regarding the situation of journalists in Honduras and their treatment by the JOH regime. "The Honduran State often says, or it is customary to say, this case had nothing to do with their profession, it had to do with economic, sentimental or whatever problems, but I think that is not the answer, the answer is to see what did the journalist do, what did the presenter do, what did the communicator do, who could they have bothered, investigate that line and then well then discard it, but not a priori to make an excuse not to investigate."

The agreement between Guatemala and the US to declare the former a safe third country caused widespread reactions. "On Friday afternoon, the US and Guatemala signed an agreement that will direct Central American migrants who pass through Guatemala hoping to seek asylum in the United States to first apply for protection in Guatemala instead. Those who travel to the US without applying for asylum in Guatemala could be removed by US border officials to that country. (...) Notably, it does not do so due explicitly [i.e. calling Guatemala a safe third country], likely due to Guatemalan controversies over third safe country deals and legal barriers to such an agreement erected by Guatemala's court system. Nevertheless, the move is expected to curb migration from Guatemala, Honduras, and El Salvador, the Central American countries from which the bulk of asylum-seekers at the US border originate. (...) With US activists and Democratic politicians decrying the deal, lawsuits are expected to follow. Rep. Eliot Engel, D-NY, chair of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, called the agreement "illegal." "Simply put, Guatemala is not a safe country for refugees and asylum seekers, as the law requires," he said. And lawyers from the ACLU, which has been involved in a number of lawsuits challenging US attempts to limit asylum claims, agreed."

The Economist calls the agreement "morally and legally precarious—and a potential game-changer".

Criterio cites a press release by Alianza Americas which denounces that the agreement "erodes democracy and disregards causes of migration".

Honduras Daily: COPINH; Miskito; Corruption - Pandora; MACCIH; Judicial Power; Migration - Mexico; Penal Code; National Police; Drug Trafficking; and Twitter Wars

COPINH denounces that the mayor of Gracias, Lempira threatened community members of Montaña Verde and that the courts n Gracias did not inform them about a trial for illegal logging close to the water source of Montaña Verde. COPINH believes that this behavior favors the accused illegal loggers.

To no surprise, close JOH ally and president of the Judicial Power, Rolando Argueta, welcomes the evaluation of the MACCIH - denounced by some as a tactic to further stall the renovation of its contract (see previous e-mails).

He showed his real intentions by further claiming that the Honduran judicial system is now able to function without the MACCIH.

La Prensa reports that US court documents claim that the Honduran drug cartel leader Héctor Emilio Fernández Rosa, "Don H", payed $2 million to Manuel Zelaya in 2005. The same documents also claim that Los Cachiros paid $500'000 to support the presidential campaign of Pepe Lobo in 2009.

Zelaya denies having received money from Don H.

Honduras Daily: HRDs - Protection Mechanism; Public Sector - Criminalization; Journalists; Militarization; Corruption - de Lobo; Drug Trafficking - Lobo, Mel; Migration; National Police; STENEE; and Resisting the Penal Code

Global Witness published its annual report on the situation of land and environmental defenders. They document 164 assassinations worldwide in 2018, Latin American being the region with the highest murder rate and Guatemala being the country with the highest rate per capita. For Honduras, they documented four assassinations - the tenth highest in the world and the third highest per capita. The report focuses on the criminalisation of defenders.

ACI Participa denounces that the protection mechanism prioritizes non-human rights defenders handing out blinded cars and more. They were made aware of this using the Law for Access to Public Information. They also found that of the 25 million Lempiras budget of the mechanism, half of which is meant for protective measures for HRDs, by December 2018, only one third has been executed.

CESPAD published a report in which they investigated the question if a democratic reform for the defense and security sector of Honduras is feasible. "The study is guided by two central questions: the first, what transformations and continuities has the defense / security sector had in recent years (2009-2017) and what have been its impacts for democracy in terms of democratization and de-democratization? Second, is it possible to democratize the defense / security sector and establish a democratic policy and not rely on force, as the articulating center of state operation?"

The MP published a second set of infographics, this time on the corruption case against the former first lady Rosa Elena Bonilla de Lobo.

https://twitter.com/MP_Honduras/status/1156274866754134022

Criterio published new details on the role of Fabio Lobo in drug trafficking activities. He established contacts for the Valle Valle cartel to many important figures, his then president father, the now Security Minister Julián Pacheco Tinoco as well as JOH's brother Tony Hernández.

<https://criterio.hn/2019/07/30/tony-hernandez-socio-del-cartel-de-los-valle-valle/>

On Sunday, La Prensa reported on alleged links between drug traffickers and former president Manuel Zelaya (see yesterday's e-mail). Zelaya now held a press conference. He reiterates his innocence and denounces La Prensa for having distorted the facts.

He also highlights that drug trafficking activities have increased since 2010, i.e. after the coup against him.

The former president Pepe Lobo supports him - with his proper agenda given that he himself is accused of links to drug trafficking - saying that drug traffickers in US custody will say anything to get a better deal.

Javier Suazo published an analysis of the feud between the former director of the Central Bank of Honduras, Hugo Noé Pino, and the Executive Secretary of CEPAL, Alicia Bárcenas. The former accuses Bárcenas of painting a rosy picture of the Honduran economy in support of the JOH regime. "Doña Alicia Bárcenas owes the Honduran people an apology, since the welfare of a country cannot be measured by spending cuts and tax increases that result in a low fiscal deficit, low inflation and insufficient GDP growth in sectors generating few good quality jobs. We must analyze these policy measures and their impact on the real sector, highlighting the structural problems that halt development and do not allow progress, including corruption, impunity and the crisis of political and social governance of an illegitimate government."

See for example the second link on the claims by CEPAL.
